EnerCmed is a €3M Interreg Euro-MED project built around a clear ambition: turning the Mediterranean green transition into practical models that cities can use. With 9 partners across 5 countries, 5 pilot cities and 16 follower cities, the project connects renewable energy, nature-based solutions, public buildings, community action and urban resilience.

On 4 June 2026, the Final Conference at Genova Blue District will bring together institutions, experts, researchers and city representatives to discuss how Mediterranean cities can move from tested pilots to scalable solutions for cleaner energy, greener public spaces and more resilient urban systems.
